Lindsay Pettus - Community Member

Lindsay Pettus is a lifetime member of the Indian Land community. He graduated from Indian Land High School and attended the University of South Carolina. As an adult, Lindsay became very interested in the Lancaster County Historical Commission. His love for history created tremendous interest in the history of Lancaster County, which continued to include surrounding counties and the state of South Carolina. Lindsay prepared a pictorial presentation of people and places that he gave many times. He became interested in preserving our natural resources. Lindsay developed a love for all that nature has to offer and most especially the Catawba River. Out of this came the transformation of the Katawba Valley Land Trust, which protects more than 7,500 acres of land in the Catawba River Valley. Lindsay has long been a strong supporter of the Catawba Indian Tribe. He purchased many pieces of pottery and has since donated them to the Native Indian Room, to be used by USC Lancaster for Indian studies. It would be impossible for me to name all the awards and certificates of achievement Lindsay has received. Because of his love for Lancaster County, along with his efforts to preserve its natural resources for centuries to come, David Lindsay Pettus belongs right beside the other great pioneers who came before him.
